About this training:

Agencies serving individuals with intellectual disabilities and autism remain faced with significant challenges in recruiting and retaining a new generation of staff. National turnover rates range from 40% to 70%, making service continuity and quality difficult at best. A major variable in staff retention is the quality of your frontline supervisors. Do they have the basic skills to help minimize turnover or have they been "thrown" into their positions with little training? In this dynamic and humorous training, staff will learn the basics of supervision, characteristics of positive supervision, how to handle conflicts and behavioral correction, and more.

Training Perks:

- NADSP approved for Frontline Supervisors.

About this training:

As a leader, or soon to be leader, you must know how to successfully navigate conflict and how to have difficult discussions that are productive. Let's face it, most people hate conflict! The thought of disciplining someone makes your palms sweat and your heart pound so loud you can hear it in your ears! Conflict and difficult discussions can be hard! Yet, to be a successful leader you must learn how to handle conflict and embrace difficult discussions. We will show you how!

In this session participants will learn:

1. How To Deal with Difficult People
2. How to Confront and Address Undesirable Employee Behavior
3. How to model behavior that others will WANT to follow
4. How to clearly communicate and reinforce the behavior that you desire
5. Examples and role play scenarios will be presented around issues such as call off/scheduling conflicts, not wanting to take individuals served out on an outing (because it's too hot, too far, too inconvenient), not respecting individuals' rights, punctuality, and non-compliance with documentation

Audience: Supervisors, Directors, CEOs and other leaders in the field of Intellectual Disabilities and Autism
